

GOLDSWORTH ROAD ORTHODONTIC PATIENT SURVEY 2011

A group of 50 orthodontic patients were surveyed with regard to their experience of having orthodontic treatment. The questionnaires were given to the patients rather than their parents as it was felt that patients in this age group were able to comment on their personal experiences with greater accuracy. The results are outlined below.

It would appear that although we perceive that patients want treatment because all their friends are having braces, our respondents felt that they had made a personal decision based on their own assessment of their teeth.
